DOM PEDRO.
The Land He Left Behind Him.

Don Pedro, next to the Emperor of all the Russias, rules over the largest continuous territory under one government on the globe. Official reports give it an area of 4,891,394 square miles, more or less. Its greatest length is 2,000 miles, and its greatest breadth is 2,470. To go all over it in an ordinary lifetime one would need to travel as fast as its Emperor has been doing while in this country. It is divided into twenty provinces and one independent municipality, each of which has a local capital.
The empire claims a population of 11-780,000, but some authorities claim that it does not contain more than 7,000,000 people of all races. The whites number about one-third of the entire population, and are chiefly of Portuguese descent. In the seaboard cities there are many French, Germans and English, and some of whom are engaged in trade. Nearly one-third of the inhabitants are Indians.
They represent all degrees of civilization worth speaking of. Some of the interior tribes are cannibals. They practice jerk-ing the meat obtained from enemies' bodies and storing it up for a rainy day.
In this respect they show more foresight and thrift than the natives of the Cannibal Island. Most of the Indians, however, are very quiet and friendly. They subsist for the most part on game and wild fruits. They require little by way of houses. Their favorite clothing is red paint. The country contains nearly 1,000,000 negroes. The remainder of the population consists of mixed races. Some of the races are very decidedly mixed, having the blood of negroes, Indians and whites in their veins.

Since Brazil was discovered, in the year 1500, and settlements were commenced shortly afterward, it seems somewhat remarkable that it has not a larger white population. This may be explained by the fact that the country was long tributary to Portugal which did not contain inhabitants enough to people so vast a country. During the past twenty years Brazil has made strenuous exertions to procure settlers from foreign countries.
They have not only been offered land without cost, but in some instances have had half of their passage money paid.
The Germans have availed themselves of these liberal offers to the greatest extent of any people. According to official reports there are fifty colonies in the empire, containing, on an average, 1,000 persons each. At the close of our civil war quite a number of confederates removed to Brazil. As a rule, the foreign settlers do not take kindly to the country.
Quite likely this is owing to the circumstance that soil, climate, productions, language, and institutions of Brazil are very unlike those of the countries from which settlers have been obtained. Considerable time is required for foreigners to accommodate themselves to the new order of things.

All intelligent travelers who have visited Brazil, speak in the most glowing terms of the country. Prof. Agassiz regarded it as the most productive and interesting country on the globe, and the one in which it is the easiest to obtain a livelihood. Some who have sailed up the Amazon declare that a vessel can be loaded with Brazil nuts at an expense of only a few cents per bushel. These constitute a valuable article of commerce, while the oil extracted from them is very desirable. All the tropical fruits are produced in Brazil almost without cultivation. The soil in many parts of the country will produce twenty successive crops of cotton, tobacco, or sugar cane, without the application of manure.
No country in the world approaches the land of Dom Pedro in the variety of its forest productions. Prof.
Agassiz states that he saw one hundred and seventeen different kinds of valuable wood that were cut from a piece of land not a half a mile square. They represented almost every variety of color, and many of them were capable of receiving a high polish. One tree furnishes wax that is used for candles; another pitch which is used for food; and still another yields a juice which is used in the place of intoxicating liquor. There is a single variety of palm from which the natives obtain food, drink, clothing, bedding, cordage, fishing tackle, medicine and the material they manufacture into dwellings, weapons, harpoons and musical instruments. Doubtless the day is not distant when the valuable woods of Brazil will be used for various useful and ornamental purposes. Brazil is not only a "wooden country," but the country that produces the most beautiful woods in the world.

If one does not want to cut wood that is nearly as hard as ivory, with a tropical sun exactly overhead, there are other things he can busy himself about. For instance, he may shovel up diamonds and rubies. He can also quarry lime-stone, that is so sonorous that it makes good church bells. So, too, he may engage in loading carts with honey, some sweet and some sour, which is collected by bees that have no stings, but which work all the year long. In short, if any one wants to go South and grow up with a good country, let him make the acquaintance of Dom Pedro and accompany him home.

The history of a Plaster.
Years ago the Rubber Porous Plaster was recognized as a useful and efficient external remedy, possessing peculiar merits different from anything ever known or used for a like purpose before.
The reasons why it became so popular were these:—First, it was discovered that rubber was the natural reservoir of electricity, and, consequently, possessed great curative properties. Second, when rendered soft and pliable it became a convenient base for the best external stimulants. Third, it could be worn without soiling the clothing or causing the wearer any inconvenience. Like all new inventions it was not perfect, but capable of improvements. These improvements have been made in BENSON'S CAPSINE POROUS PLASTER. The great objection ever found to the porous plasters by physicians and the public has been that its action is not prompt or decided enough. The introduction of Capsine into a porous plaster overcomes this objection entirely. It causes it to act immediately, and to cure in less time and with more certainty than the ordinary article. BENSON'S CAPSINE POR-OUS PLASTER is truly a remarkable article. It is prepared by a firm of skilled pharmaceutical chemists, who have had large experience in manufacturing various kinds of plasters and liniments for the surgeons and hospitals of this and other countries.
This plaster, the result of their experiments and study, is indorsed by the best physicians as greatly superior to ordinary porous plasters and liniments, and as being the best remedy that could possibly be devised for rheumatism, lame and weak backs, pains in the side and chest, or any of the troubles for which a porous plaster or liniment has been used. People suffering from stubborn colic will find that it affords them great relief by wearing one on the breast. The secret of BENSON'S CAPSINE PLASTER is its marvelous influence over the circulation. It strengthens and relieves pain almost from the moment of its application. Let any one who is skeptical of the merits of this article consult their physician. To be obtained of all druggists for 25 cents.
